CHARACTER

Whatever activity you're engaged in, Catherine, there's an underlying sense of purpose to your life. Although you are sociable, witty and fun-loving, there's a more serious side to you that's profoundly moved by any kind of suffering and discord perceived in the world. With a genuine concern for the welfare of humanity, there's a deep subconscious movement towards eliminating the pain and misery of the human condition in all that you do. Connected to the broader picture, you're a natural defender of the underdog and would excel as a spokesperson, whether it's in your local community or professional life.

You enjoy bringing things together, whether it's a group of friends or a crazy idea! For a double Cancerian you can be quite extravert at times, displaying a very humorous streak to your character. It's important to you to create a favourable impression, yet you are highly individualistic and often surprise yourself and others by doing the unexpected.

You love to be the centre of attention and people are drawn into your orbit by your gentle charm and generous nature. Confident and inquisitive, you really come alive in company, especially at any sort of family gathering. You're able to interact with people from diverse cultures and walks of life and your excellent memory ensures you never forget a face or a name.

Your keen intelligence and highly fertile mind enables you get the idea of something in a flash. With a thirst for knowledge you take great delight in research and investigative work. Fascinated by human behaviour, you're stimulated by subjects that challenge the rational way of thinking, such as the mystical and spiritual realms.

Extremely capable in running your life, you manage your affairs in a business-like manner. Handling money comes naturally to you and you're practical, resourceful and rarely extravagant. Nevertheless, with a discerning eye, you enjoy purchasing beautiful things, particularly to enhance your environment. On a more personal level, you take great care to dress according to the needs of a situation but, despite your attractive appearance, you may be highly critical of how you look.

There's a childlike quality to you that loves to be spontaneous and artistic. Highly intuitive, you've a special rapport with children who delight in your company and respond to your tenderness. Your inner nature is nourished through affection and the demonstration of love in all its forms. You're a loyal friend and place great emphasis on maintaining contact with family members and loved ones. In fact, the role of the matriarch comes quite naturally to you and you're prepared to sacrifice much for the wellbeing of others.

People instinctively trust you, feeling comfortable and relaxed in your presence. It's not unusual for them to confide in you the intimate details of their lives, although you can be quite secretive about your own life. Indeed, there's a certain caution and innate shyness that can overcome you in certain circumstances where you are taken off guard. The combined influence of the Moon and Neptune is magnified in your chart, making you acutely sensitive to emotional fluctuations or changes in psychic vibrations. You tend to respond badly to any kind of criticism but are usually able to disguise how deeply this affects you.

A difficult aspect between the Moon and Pluto compels you to know the ins and outs of what's happening around you. This could sometimes border on paranoia if you think somebody's holding back the truth of a situation or things are left up in the air. With this psychological intensity, you can be likened to the proverbial pressure pot with periodic eruptions of emotional steam! The thing is, you expect the same type of loyalty and trust that you invest in people and there can be a great release of force and anger should your faith be shattered.

As much as you enjoy being absorbed in activity, it's important that you find time to withdraw from the busyness of the world. Being amongst nature or in the solitude of a peaceful environment (especially near the water) would be particularly cathartic and restore your vital energies. It may be a good idea to use these times as some form of meditation, since you're prone to ruminate on the past and resurrect buried emotions when alone.

With Mars, the planet associated with war and aggression, potently placed in your chart, it may seem at times as though you must do battle with the forces of the world. It's clear you've had to shoulder a good deal of responsibility through family upheavals and personal trauma in your formative years. As a result, you can be highly defensive regarding issues that touch too close to home. It's often difficult to pinpoint where irrational fears and mood swings originate, such is the swiftness and stealth in which these emotions invade your conscious awareness. However, the courage and resolve to transcend any emotional negativity is a major factor emerging from your chart.

Through your own example you can inspire others and ignite their enthusiasm by sharing with them your vision of how things could be. You're an idealist, Catherine, yet an individual deeply rooted in the earth and the practicalities of these times. But as altruistic and charitable as you are, the greatest challenge may lie in your powers to discriminate between duty and the expectation of others and by doing what pleases you in refusing to compromise in the living of your life.

WORK AND CREATIVITY

It's imperative to you to be in an effective and responsible role in the workplace. Your chart suggests you were born to serve in some way, perhaps as a role model excelling in a unique discipline or area of expertise. A strong work ethic is emphasised by a powerful Saturn in the Sixth House of service and a prominently placed Mars. With good organisational skills and excellent time management, you're able to maximise the working day. You handle responsibility well and have a fine intellectual grasp of the needs of a situation. You function most effectively when there's a challenge and delight in proving others wrong by doing the seemingly impossible! Indeed, sometimes it seems you're on a personal crusade.

You embrace new ideas and projects with great enthusiasm, instilling confidence in those around you and impressing those in authority by your tenacity and practical skills. Although you're able to work as part of a group, you function most effectively as team leader or working on your own initiative. You're invaluable as an initiator as well as having the necessary vision to see an enterprise through to its completion. Leadership qualities are emphasised and you employ a hands on approach wherever possible, leading by example and getting involved in the action.

Reliable and trustworthy, you're respected by colleagues, who admire your sense of fair play. Your nurturing nature often comes to the fore and you tend to take employees (particularly new people) under your wing until they know the ropes. Despite your diplomacy and charm, however, you can be quite aggressive at times and prone to rub people up the wrong way! Work's a serious business as far as you're concerned but you're usually able to diffuse any volatile situations through your ability to see the funny side of things.

You handle responsibility well and have an instinctual grasp of the changing fads and influences of the public. Consequently, you may have considered working in public relations or as a researcher behind the scenes. An excellent negotiator, you could utilise your powers of persuasion by selling property, especially older buildings. Cancerians are often keen historians and have a fascination, not only with their own roots and ancestors, but also for ancient civilisations as well. However, it's really the sensitive or taboo areas of the human condition that hold the most fascination for you. With a wonderful faculty to communicate with people on an intimate level, you would make a fine counsellor, psychologist or teacher. You could excel in the business world but would not be fulfilled by the acquisition of money for its own sake. You have the potential to earn a substantial salary but there are likely to be fluctuations in your financial status during your working life, and especially during periods of transformation.

You might find it difficult yourself to explain what motivates you. Although not overtly ambitious, you've a strong inner movement to accomplish your goals and objectives. You're a perfectionist and see that if a job's worth doing, then it follows that you should do your best. However, you're inclined to push yourself to the limit, either firing on all cylinders or depleted and in need of replenishment. Errors of judgement could sometimes arise with the fluctuation of your vitality. On a more subtle level you may feel that whatever you do isn't good enough which could give rise to self-doubt and uncertainty. It's important for you to set your sights on goals that are realistic and achievable.

There's certainly no lack of courage and drive to further your career, but your true vocation may have eluded you, at least in the earlier years. You may have been pushed in a direction that wasn't truly fulfilling but where you were challenged to prove yourself to those who may have doubted your abilities. Thus you've been compelled to present a strong self-image in your public life to conceal any weaknesses or fears holding you back. This has served you since you've demonstrated how effective you are in handling yourself in the world.

Despite your worldly achievements, it's clear from your chart that you have a deeper yearning to be creative and to connect with something of more lasting value. You are the artist, Catherine, but you may have been so hard up against your canvas that you've not yet been able to realise your full potential. It appears you've done the hard work and completed your apprenticeship in service to the world. Now could be the time to re-evaluate your priorities and do what truly pleases you.

Whatever your next direction, you're likely to have a leaning towards higher knowledge and self discovery. Work opportunities abroad could open up new horizons, particularly in an environment close to the sea. It would be especially nourishing for you to work from home, perhaps establishing a business from a creative interest, such as writing, musical composition or some form of craftwork. There's also the potential to create a sanctuary, either for people or animals, or be involved in some kind of humanitarian project.

Crossing the threshold into the unknown is a giant step but one for which you are adequately prepared. It's clear your unique talents will continue to be refined and creatively expressed throughout the next phase of your life.

LOVE AND RELATIONSHIPS

The way of love, although deeply absorbing for you Catherine, has been a minefield of emotional anxieties and bittersweet romances that have never really lived up to what they promised. You're a true romantic but the actuality of living your dream with your knight in shining armour may have eluded you. The potential for a loving relationship is enhanced by harmonious contacts between the Sun, Venus and Mars. However, the challenging position of Saturn has cast its shadow over much of your solar potential, suggesting the need for caution and a practical approach in your relationships until love is sufficiently established.

There's a marked difference between your public and private persona. You're often quite animated and excitable in social situations, so it's not easy for someone to get to know you closely on first meeting. You are charming and charismatic, delighting in situations where you can be flirtatious and light-hearted. Nevertheless, you are often plagued by self-doubt and irrational fears that you don't somehow measure up to the expectations of others. You find it unsettling, and perhaps a little embarrassing, when your femininity is accentuated, either in your appearance or your behaviour. Although outwardly confident in your everyday dealings with people, when you're attracted to someone your immediate reaction is to clam up and disguise any indication of sexual attraction.

It stabilises you to be in a partnership since there's usually a lot of drama happening around you in your domestic life. You're not interested in smooth-talking guys looking for short-term affairs but are drawn to a man who is mature and established in some way in the world. For you it's important that a potential lover be authoritative and masculine and that you feel secure and cherished in his presence. Marriage and a traditional white wedding would be extremely appealing to you. It's also likely that you'll have the opportunity of a relationship with someone from a different culture or background during your lifetime.

You have a caring, sensual nature and physical closeness between you and your partner is vital. You adore the reassuring embrace of man and are highly receptive to the delights of love. However, a certain fear or hesitation arising within you may prevent you from being completely free and spontaneous in your love.

Your chart suggests that, although you were dearly loved, childhood may have been a confusing time with powerful undercurrents of tension and anxiety within the home. Perhaps there was a specific event or unexplained circumstances that affected you deeply. As an adult, there may be a holding back in love for fear of disturbing and exposing the deep emotions of the child. It's well known that Cancerians have a resilient outer shell to conceal their vulnerable inner softness. Venus also placed in Cancer has made you especially guarded and protective in love.

It's difficult for you to let go of emotional traumas of the past since you tend to cling on to the memory of them and replay the images in your mind. Consequently the light of passion that shimmers so vibrantly within you has been diffused through the failure of past lovers to truly reach you. This has caused chronic feelings of disillusionment and despair, fuelling the need for success and recognition in the world. As a result, you've directed much of your vitality into your professional life and, since the instinct for motherhood is accentuated in your chart, you may have substituted devotion to the children for the love of a man.

Although you're a consummate nest builder and the archetypal mother who absolutely dotes on her kids, there's also an independent streak that demands a certain amount of freedom of movement. There's often a dilemma between your work and love life, since your career is so important to you.

It's easy for things to escalate out of control between you and a lover. When things reach a crisis point, there can be unpredictable or provocative behaviour and even an unconscious movement to sabotage your love. Moods swings and periods of withdrawal may also frequently beset you. Sometimes you may even feel you could function quite well without a close relationship as long as you have a network of family and friends for support.

It has evidently been difficult for you to express love in a way that has been truly fulfilling. Your capacity to love and care for your partner cannot be understated. Finding somebody, however, who is worthy and can reciprocate such love is another matter.

Nevertheless, love will not leave you alone, Catherine. It's important for you to realise that you have been endeavouring to do the impossible in trying to please everybody except yourself. You are protected now by your hard won experience in love and by your fine intuition which informs you of the appropriate action to take in a situation. In trusting to the integrity of this inner knowledge, there is a wonderful potential for transformation in love and for a fulfilling relationship that will harmoniously endure.

LIFE'S DIRECTION

The Sun in the Twelfth House symbolises that your life's purpose will in some way be directed towards a deeper understanding of the human condition, with possible leanings towards the more mystical side of life. Venus also occupies the Twelfth House, magnifying the potential for self change through the power of love and the opportunity to be creatively fulfilled.

Although your life's experience has served and contributed to where you are now, it seems you are at a point where you are about to undergo a major re-appraisal of many areas of your life. It may be extremely challenging and take considerable effort in facing yourself before your true aspirations can be realised. However, this is all part of the transformative process that is happening and ultimately you will come through into a new place, perhaps geographically as well as within yourself.

The Moon, your chart ruler, whilst heightening the senses and strengthening the maternal love for your children, influences you to remain in the comfort of that which is familiar and the security of the known. It is interesting to note the symbol of the place name in Dorset where you were born. Perhaps now's the time to venture beyond the security of the "Poole" that has sustained you thus far in your life. Just as the crab scuttles out of its protective layer to perpetuate its existence, then darts back at the first sign of danger, so do you replicate this behaviour by exposing only so much of yourself before withdrawing to the safety of your bolt-hole. However, the Moon in your Fifth House of creativity and pleasure compels you to come out and take a chance on life.

It's not easy for you to sever relationships and break with situations that no longer serve you. The dilemma whether to continue to compromise with your life or to take the action to change things once and for all is not a task for the faint-hearted. To put your life on the line is to invoke the power of life itself and set in motion the irreversible shift of consciousness that heralds the new. Anxiety and a deep feeling of confusion could precede the turning point before you break free from the constriction of the family orbit. Then, after the initial elation, a movement towards higher knowledge or a spiritual teaching could follow, accompanied by extended travel abroad or in a completely new environment.

We wish you well on your journey, Catherine.
